5.2.2 Crack Width Calculations for GFRP Reinforcement:

The current expressions used in calculating the crack width for concrete members are merely empirical in nature. The majority of design provisions to calculate crack width in members with FRP are based on modifications of statistical models made according to the Gergely-Lutz equation. The new expression by ISIS M04-00 (2001) suggests calculating crack width for members reinforced with FRP using the following equation:

$$w = 11 \times 10^{-6} \sigma_{frp} K_b \frac{h_2}{h_1} \sqrt[3]{d_c A} \quad (5.3)$$ where,

w = the crack width at the tensile face of the beam, mm

E_s = modulus of elasticity of the steel, MPa
